

NADCP
RISE21
LAW ENFORCEMENT TRACK

Protect and Serve: How 21st Century Policing Is Influencing Operational Leadership and Change in the Justice System

Law enforcement officers are a critical component in smart, effective reforms to the American justice system. Ongoing education ensures police officers remain part of the conversation as 21st century policing evolves and justice partners work collaboratively to implement new approaches to policing. The National Association of Drug Court Professionals' RISE21 conference presents some of the nation's most renowned experts and thought leaders in the critical components of policing in the 21st century, including mental health and trauma, treatment courts, substance use trends, and more in sessions designed for law enforcement by law enforcement.

Continuing education certification has been applied for. Learn more, register, and secure discounted hotels at RISE21.org!

SUNDAY, AUGUST 15, 2021

7:45 a.m. – 9:00 a.m.

Law Enforcement Discipline-Specific Session

Network with other law enforcement officers at RISE21 and get a preview of the upcoming law enforcement curriculum designed to meet the needs of law enforcement officers in treatment courts.

Inspector Vanessa Price (ret.) – Director, National Drug Court Institute, retired Oklahoma City Police Department

Lt. Tammy Reeder – Oklahoma City Police Department

9:30 a.m. – 12:30 p.m.

DOPE: De-escalating Officer Patrol Encounters

Law enforcement and civilians have a shared responsibility when situations require them to interact. But poorly trained or equipped officers sometimes resort to unnecessary force due to the failure to employ de-escalation techniques. In this session, officers will learn about de-escalation techniques, recognizing the need to call for assistance, and understanding how to approach those with differing abilities, decreasing the need for use-of-force actions.

Lt. Stan Campbell (ret.) – Chief operating officer, CCW Safe and use of force expert, social activist, speaker

Det. Rob High – Oklahoma City Police Department, CCW Safe consultant

MONDAY, AUGUST 16, 2021

7:45 a.m. – 9:00 a.m.

Building Consortiums of Care for First Responders

A panel discussion of national mental health and public service leaders will address trauma management needs for justice system professionals. The discussion showcases partnership across national networks to promote officer well-being, resiliency, mental health, and community engagement. Panelists include an officer responding to the ambush of his peers at police headquarters, first responders from the World Trade Center attack on September 11, and renowned behavioral health researchers.

Captain Stacey Owens (ret.) – Greenville, South Carolina Police Department

Lt. William Keegan (ret.) – Founder and president, Heart/9-11

Adrienne Kennedy – National Alliance on Mental Illness of Central Texas

Dr. Steven Southwick – Glenn H. Greenberg Professor Emeritus of Psychiatry, Yale School of Medicine

Learn more at RISE21.org

9:30 a.m. – 10:45 a.m.

High in Plain Sight: The Climate of Rapidly Evolving Drug Trends and Concealment

The Tall Cop ("Tall Cop Says Stop") will highlight changes in drug trends and their impact. This session teaches attendees new drug trends and how older ones are evolving. Attendees will receive visual aids of new stash clothing, product logos, and terms associated with drug culture. Also discussed will be popular drugs used to avoid detection in public and through drug tests.

Jermaine Galloway – Retired police officer, author, presenter

3:30 p.m. – 4:45 p.m.

Core Competencies for Law Enforcement Officers in Treatment Court

Law enforcement officers in play a vital role on treatment court teams and the success of their participants. Key to officers' success on the team is their understanding of core competencies that guide the officer as part of the multidisciplinary team and, most importantly, how they engage program participants.

Officer Bennie Evans – City of Alexandria Police Department

TUESDAY, AUGUST 17, 2021

9:30 a.m. – 10:45 a.m.

Fight Like A Girl: Coping With Job-related Trauma for First Responders and Front-line Workers

On August 29, 2010 an Oklahoma County Sheriff's Department requested assistance with a DUI arrest. Officer Katie Lawson responded to the call and encountered an individual who would eventually point an AR-15 at her face. Sgt. Katie Lawson shares her story of survival, how law enforcement run toward the danger, and a reminder that the good guys (and girls) do win.

Sgt. Katie Lawson – Oklahoma City Police Department

11:15 a.m. – 12:30 p.m.

Working Wounded: Addressing Trauma and Secondary Trauma for First Responders and Front-line Workers

Understanding the impact of trauma is critical to effective intervention and, many times, this is overlooked with first responders or caregiving professionals. Vicarious or secondary trauma impacts co-workers and others working with trauma or a colleague experiencing the effects of trauma. Secondary trauma can result in burnout, transference, and a variety of other health issues. This session will discuss the types of trauma exposures in law enforcement and healthy coping skills to address the aftereffects of trauma exposure.

Carl Dawson, L.P.C.